Form of Abrahams Lincoln Memorial

The Abraham Lincoln memorial originated from Greek style; the color of the memorial is white, and most of the structures are made from marble. The marble might represent the and pureness of President Lincoln. The structure was made because of the ultimate sacrifice of President Lincoln. The medium of the environment is green with nature. It can refer to the peace of mind of this place. There are three chambers, and the Lincoln statue is the largest statue in the united states as a memorial. From the head to his foot, the statue is 19 feet long. The direction of the Lincoln heading is the former his house. (Arlington) Abraham Lincoln's initial represent as an American sign language. The tree can be used as symbolism; the cypress tree is a symbol of the memorial's interior. It means an endless eternity. Thirty-six columns were representing the states of the union at the time of Abraham Lincoln was dead. There are 48 festoons represent the 48 states in 1922. It represents Lincoln's contribution to American society to freedom, justice, law, and liberty of its citizen. The color and Greek can symbolize the goodness and intellectual thought of its individual. It represents the greatest of the past event that made a massive change to American society. The memorial is a sample of representation of a right person who contributed to society. The Oaktree in the memorial means the most loved tree in the world. It represents strength, morale, and individual thought. Goodness was expressed throughout history, and Abraham Lincoln symbolized equality or even protection for people under the law
